

red

is a powerful colour. It incites energy, excitement and vitality. In a large space it can radiate aggression but can be cosy in a small space. Use in living areas.

blue

is the colour of truth, serenity and harmony. It generates a sense of well-being and can give the impression of space. Use in living areas or bedrooms.

yellow

is the colour of intellect, mental stimulation, clarity and insight. The right yellow can lift spirits but the wrong yellow can cause anxiety. Use in living areas.

green is the colour of harmony and balance. It has a relaxing effect, evokes calmness and aids sleep. Use in living areas, bathrooms, kitchens and bedrooms.

orange

can have a gentle, warming effect. Too much can seem forceful. It promotes excitement and social interaction. Use in kitchens and living areas.

purple

is a spiritual colour and takes awareness to a higher level. It has a calming effect. Lighter shades like lilac or mauve are best. Use in studies and bedrooms.

pink

is a calming colour and creates a sense of tranquillity and warmth. It represent femininity but too much pink can be draining. Use in bedrooms.

white represents purity and joy. It creates a sense of space, peace and clarity and represents cleanliness but in large doses can be too sterile. Use in any room.

grey & black are powerful colours and should be used carefully as they can be suppressive. Both convey sophistication and work well with other hues. Use sparingly in any room.

brown is the colour of nature and earth. It is solid, reliable and supportive and can be warming when used as a feature wall. Use in living areas or bedrooms.
